TWO WOULD-BE ROBBERS MAKE HURRIED EXIT

James Newland Grocery Scene of Near Robbery Late
Saturday Evening.

The loud noise of a radio turned on to its deepest volume was a factor in preventing the robbery of the James Newland grocery, at the corner of Mound and Mingo-sts at 10:30 p.m. Saturday when two men who were said to be between 25 and 28 years of age entered the store and with the use of a revolver ordered the proprietor to put up his hands.

Mr. Newland was in the store alone, with his wife in his residence, which can be entered by a door from the grocery when two men, poorly clad, entered the store and pointing a revolver at Mr. Newland, ordered him to put up his hands.

Newland promptly bent over and started to sneak toward the door of his residence when one of the men told him that if he didn't stop he would shoot. Just at that moment Mr. Newland pushed the door into the residence open and a loud burst of radio music intermingled with Mr. Newland's, loudest static he ever heard, came from the room into the store. The would-be robbers evidently thought someone was coming to aid Newland and sped toward the door. They made a getaway before Newland could notify police.

Mr. Newland called police and Deputy Sheriff John G. Ward Jr., Police Officers McCrady and Fitzpatrick and Probation Officer L. M. Brown answered the call. They were unable to find anyone who answered the description Newland gave them, but it was reported Monday that a hot clue had been found which would be followed later Monday.

The thieves in their haste to get away failed to touch anything in the store.

TRACTION HITS CHEVY SEDAN

Harold Ryan, Columbus, Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury at Noon Monday

Harold Ryan, of Columbus, narrowly escaped injury Monday when the Chevrolet sedan he was driving was struck at Stevenson's crossing, north of town, by the 12:39 southbound traction car. Ryan was driving south and saw the traction approaching near the crossing. He put on his brakes until they locked but because of the slippery road, the tires failed to catch.

The traction car in charge of "Pop" Hyson also failed to stop, and collided with the automobile, although Ryan guided his car into the ditch to ward off the force of the collision.

The sedan was almost completely wrecked with the exception of the front end, and the front end of the traction bore evidence of the collision with splinters of wood and shattered glass. The left front electric shoe was torn off the traction car. The Circleville Motors service car towed the Chevrolet to Circleville.

E. E. NOTHSTINE VIVIDLY TELLS OF DISASTER

Relates How Two Youths
Died Under Car Which He Could Not Move.

Ed E. Nothstine, well known Island-rd farmer, witnessed the most terrible accident he says he has ever seen early Sunday on the Washington C. H. pike, just four miles north of Washington C. H., when two Wilmington youths were burned to death.

Nothstine had been in Cincinnati at the Observatory club and was returning home alone when he saw a burning wreck in the ditch at the side of the road.

He left his car and went to the wrecked automobile which was a burning holocaust and saw that two men were under the car, a big Nash coupe.

He tried to move the car but couldn't, he yelled at the top of his voice trying to rouse residents of a house nearby but got no response and finally had to give up the task of trying to save the men.

Nothstine says the head of one of the men was sticking out from under the car and was so badly burned that for awhile he thought he was a negro. The legs were entirely burned from both bodies and the skull of one of the men was crushed. After Nothstine had been at the scene of the disaster for a while aid came and the two men were taken to Washington C. H. where they were identified as Robert Hornell, 23, and Fred Bauman, 25 both of Wilmington.

Nothstine was so terrified and "unstrung" by witnessing the terrible scene that he remained the rest of the night in Washington C. H.

CONGRESS READY TO SPEED OCEAN AERIAL LEGISLATION

BY WILLIAM S. NEAL.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—An "air minded Congress" is preparing to consider legislation to speed what may be the next great step in aerial transportation—the establishment of trans-ocean dirigible lines.

With leading financiers and rich corporations already studying the possibilities of the new mode of transportation overseas, Rep. Clyde Kelly (R) of Pennsylvania, father of all air legislation enacted by Congress, announced hearings would be started on proposals to speed airship development.

Legislation already introduced by Kelly, proposes to aid in the building of an "air marine" by granting liberal government mail contracts just as the United States now is building a great ship merchant marine and has developed the airline mail.

THE FIRST STEP
The first proposal considered is expected to aid in the establishment of an American Zeppelin line from California to Manila, already in prospect by the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation.

"I feel that airship ocean transportation will become practicable, and Congress must prepare for it before the time arrives," said Kelly.

"Undoubtedly the postoffice committee will hold hearings on bills I have introduced, providing for the granting of ocean airship mail contracts on a basis of $2 a mile. Heads of great concerns have estimated they would be ready to go ahead with ocean transportation in 1931.

"My bill, which affects routes 2,000 miles or over, would aid the establishment of the California-Manila line, which undoubtedly will be the first.

"Some corporations interested, I understand, have given study to the proposal of Commander Burney of Great Britain, to create a joint service, employing American ships and the two new dirigibles built by his company.

TO CARRY MAIL
"It is expected these airships can carry 10 tons of mail, which would be sorted en route. A regular postoffice would be built in them. Carrying such quantities, they could provide a low mail rate."

The Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation has indicated it is discussing trans-atlantic plans with German Zeppelin interests, rather than the British.

The historic round the world flight of the Graf Zeppelin was closely watched by those interested in trans-oceanic dirigible mail.

POSTPONE MEETING

CHICAGO COPS LAY TRAP TO CAPTURE 21

Assistant States Attorney Held
For Many Fashionable
Holdups.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—A clever police trap followed by a series of raids today resulted in the arrests of 21 persons including Assistant State's Attorney Harry J. Busch and six women.

The raids, authorities believe, will solve the mystery of numerous recent robberies in fashionable homes where bandits gained entry by posing as friends or police officers.

The trap, which has been in the making for several weeks, was sprung last night when police learned the gang was becoming wary and was preparing to flee to Detroit where several big "jobs" had been planned.

It is known that Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the district attorney's office, had been listening to telephone conversations and keeping under surveillance four men arrested as suspects following a $25,000 jewelry robbery here.

Several of those captured have long police records.

POLITICAL BOSS
Busch, known as a political leader here, was said to have been overheard in several conversations with Thomas Abbott, alleged head of a robbery and narcotic gang. Abbott was one of those arrested. Busch is being held for questioning.

The arrests, police announced, were made as a result of the home of Charles M. Righter, where gems valued at $25,000 were taken.

From what conversations are reported Roche said he believed the gang committed 25 to 50 robberies in the last few months and was planning to go to Detroit today for a "$20,000 job."

At the home of James Houston, one of the men seized, police found four revolvers and a sawed off shotgun. In the cushion of Houston's automobile a zipper-like arrangement made it possible to pull a corner of the cushion open and to reach a revolver kept there.

Others seized in the raids included Abbott's wife, Lillian, Houston's wife, Evelyn; Nick Knauth; Allen Swelander; Betty Thorn; William Ward; Frances Sterling; Margie Jackson; William Frances; David Rose and Mike Hoffman.

Several others of the gang are being sought.

MAX SCHMELLING TO TANGLE WITH MALONEY IN GERMANY

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Max Schmelling will emerge from behind his barbed-sauerkraut entanglements before the end of March to meet Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, in some German ring. By way of warming up the old target eye for the big sharpshooting that is to come later on, it will be Schmelling's first start since the New York "Boxing" Commission put the bowsher on him last summer and it also will be his last before going in with the Sharkey-Scott survivor on June 26 for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The Maloney match hasn't been definitely made but Joe Jacobs, the manager who sometimes knows what his fighter has decided to do, seemed to take it for granted today that Maloney was "set." I didn't ask him but I presume he knows just when Maloney may stop being set and become upset. It is always comforting to know these things; otherwise a warm-up is liable to be one of those things that boil right over on you.

In this connection, to know Mr. Maloney is to love him. A good fighter against the muggs, he is a mugg against the good ones; in fact, he is that most desirable of all opponents, namely a very reliable mugg.

His record is clear. There never has been a complaint against him. Yet the man is not wholly without menace. He has had his moments. He was good enough, for example, to prove that Sharkey was qualified to meet Dempsey and he was entirely too good the night they tried to disguise Jack Delaney as a heavyweight championship prize fighter. In other words, they used to pay off with Maloney; now they use him.

Frank C. Mortimer, Vice President of the Citizens National Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles, California, says:

THAT there is no class in the citizenship of any nation which is entitled to greater consideration than the farmer. He constitutes the very fiber of the community in which he dwells.

From the earliest tiller of our soil to our present day farmer, he has exercised habits of thrift and frugality. And great as is the value of thrift from the point of economics, yet its value is not limited wholly to that field.

The training afforded by its practice calls for the exercise of qualities that are predominantly moral in character. It means self-control. It means self-mastery. Long ago the farmer learned to forego immediate pleasure for the sake of some more distant good.

Through hardship and toil, on the frontier and the prairie, in the valleys and on the hillsides, he has labored to supply the immediate wants of his household and food for the peoples of the earth. That which he has gathered and saved has become the foundation of our wealth as a nation. His steadiness, industry and sobriety are political virtues which make for the stability and permanence of our government.

in the bull pen for purposes of the warm up, a sort of gnarled old backstop who takes what the pitchers have to throw, and then sends them into the "real ball game." Too many punches have hit Maloney on the countenance and for his own good, not enough of them have bounced.

Anyhow, that's the way the Schmelling crowd sees him and I trust they are making no mistake. To err is human and so is a punch on the nose. If Schmelling's happened to be the nose in question, the punch that hit it would cost him $200,000 in the June, heavyweight finals and his chance at the million-dollar title, so he will do well to have a care. This Maloney has had his moments, as mentioned. It must be admitted, however, that these are most infrequent compared to the 10 moments he usually has—one for each beat of the referee's count.

ROBERT LEES EDGE JACKSON

Bob Shea Pulls Real Stalling Stunt To Hold Lead of 31-30.

With Bob Shea leading the team in last minute stalling, the Columbus Robert Lee Haberdasher pro cagers defeated Jackson, Mich., Sunday at the K. of C. gym, Columbus, by a score of 31-30.

The game was sensational in every sense of the word and although the Robert Lee cagers held an edge of five points with only a few minutes to play, the Jackson team came within one point of tying the count. Then Shea came into his own. He would dribble half way to the Jackson defense then would retrace his steps, taking plenty of time.

Shea and Mike O'Neill each with eight points, led the Haberdasher scoring.

SHRINERS TO HAVE BIG FORMAL BALL

Many From Here Expected To Attend Meeting In Columbus Friday.

Clark Hunsicker, who is the head of the local Shrine club, makes the following announcement which will be of high interest to local Shriners and their wives:

Baird, Aladdin's newly-elected Potentate.

The intention is to make this junction the chief social event of the Shrine of the year, the most brilliant in the history of Ohio's capital city. The Shriners and their guests will be received by Potentate Baird and Mrs. Baird, assisted by past potentates, members of the official divan and their ladies.

The banquet held in connection with this affair, will be served soon after 10 p. m.

PICKAWAY HAS 34 ACCIDENTS

Month of December Sees Good Percentage In Industrial Fatalities.

While the 99 fatal accidents in Ohio industries in December was an increase of eight over the preceding month, non-fatal claims were reduced almost 2,000, which reduced the proportionate time loss increase for the month, the days lost being 872,011, or only 10,000 more than in the preceding month.

Pickaway-co. had 34 accidents, of which one was fatal, none caused permanent disability, eight caused over seven days lost time, five, seven days or less and 20 no loss of time. In November, this county had 28 accidents with a time loss of 744 days.

The Division of Safety and Hygiene of the Industrial Commission has announced that a 25 per cent reduction in accidents in 1930 will be the goal of safety effort in the current year. Superintendent Thos. P. Kearns of the Division is optimistic over the prospects for accident prevention this year and predicated his belief in the success of industrial safety on the interest and enthusiasm shown in the recent All-Ohio Safety Congress, which was attended by almost 2,000 representatives of Ohio industries. He also cites the community interest aroused by many safety campaigns now in progress throughout the state as probable aids to more carefulness in industrial work.

The electric railway industry last year "earned the largest net revenue in its history and carried 16,000,000,000 passengers." The statistician doesn't say how many of them stood up.

OHIO CHAMBER COMMERCE TO STUDY BUS SITUATION

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 27.—The fact that death has claimed 20 persons in motor bus accidents and at least ten have been seriously injured during the last 20 days in Ohio, is a matter which will be given attention by the Board of Directors of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, when they meet in Columbus, on Wednesday, Jan. 29. Undoubtedly some recommendation will come from the board to make such accidents much less likely to occur and to throw more adequate safeguards around operation of busses.

A fact finding study has been given this matter by the Research Department of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce. As a result a tabulation has been compiled and correlated giving a nation-wide picture of efforts in various states to minimize accidents in motor traffic. This study has been conducted in an effort not only to discover the reasons for accidents, but to find remedies which have been applied to minimize the casualties. Out of this study have come several interesting facts.

It is interesting to know that deaths caused by all motor accidents in Ohio are not in excess of the number of fatalities recorded in a number of other states per motor population. However, it is also found that other states have very materially reduced the motor casualties by enactment and enforcement of remedial measures.

FACTS DEVELOP
Another fact which is developed is that states which have reduced the death rate from operation of motor vehicles have drivers' license laws upon their statute books, which also provide for adequate means of enforcement.

A third development is that within a comparatively short time after drivers' license laws are put into effect motor casualties show a decrease of approximately 20 per cent.

The Ohio Chamber of Commerce has already endorsed a driver's license law if and when supported by proper examination and when provision is made for some agency which will make possible proper enforcement; such, for instance, as the establishment of a system of state rural police. In the judgement of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce the need for adoption of remedial measures has long been evident, but the bus crash near Eaton, Ohio, Jan. 2, when two persons were killed and 11 injured, and the school bus crash at Berea last Wednesday, simply jar the public conscience into a realization that action must be taken to safeguard the school children and the public generally from such disasters.

JOE CANTILLON IS NEAR DEATH

Pioneer Baseball Man Suffers Stroke of Paralysis Last Week.

HICKMAN, Ky., Jan. 27.—Joe Cantillon, pioneer baseball man, today was reported near death at his winter home here where he suffered a paralytic stroke several days ago. A catholic priest administered last rites of the church yesterday.

Cantillon, who has been in professional baseball for 46 years, is now 64 years of age. He started as a ball player at Green Bay, Wis., in 1884.

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

MAX SCHMELLING TO TANGLE WITH MALONEY IN GERMANY

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Max Schmelling will emerge from behind his barbed-sauerkraut entanglements before the end of March to meet Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, in some German ring. By way of warming up the old target eye for the big sharpshooting that is to come later on, it will be Schmelling's first start since the New York Boxing Commission put the bowsher on him last summer and it also will be his last before going in with the Sharkey-Scott survivor on June 26 for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The Maloney match hasn't been definitely made but Joe Jacobs, the manager who sometimes knows what his fighter has decided to do, seemed to take it for granted today that Maloney was "set." I didn't ask him but I presume he knows just when Maloney may stop being set and become upset. It is always comforting to know these things; otherwise a warm-up is liable to be one of those things that boil right over on you.

In this connection, to know Mr. Maloney is to love him. A good fighter against the muggs, he is a mugg against the good ones; in fact, he is that most desirable of all opponents, namely a very reliable mugg.

His record is clear. There never has been a complaint against him. Yet the man is not wholly without menace. He has had his moments. He was good enough, for example, to prove that Sharkey was qualified to meet Dempsey and he was entirely too good the night they tried to disguise Jack Delaney as a heavyweight championship prize fighter. In other words, they used to pay off with Maloney; now they use him.

Frank C. Mortimer, Vice President of the Citizens National Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles, California, says:

THAT there is no class in the citizenship of any nation which is entitled to greater consideration than the farmer. He constitutes the very fiber of the community in which he dwells. From the earliest tiller of our soil to our present day farmer, he has exercised habits of thrift and frugality. And great as is the value of thrift from the point of economics, yet its value is not limited wholly to that field.

The training afforded by its practice calls for the exercise of qualities that are predominantly moral in character. It means self-control. It means self-mastery. Long ago the farmer learned to forego immediate pleasure for the sake of some more distant good.

Through hardship and toil, on the frontier and the prairie, in the valleys and on the hillsides, he has labored to supply the immediate wants of his household and food for the peoples of the earth. That which he has gathered and saved has become the foundation of our wealth as a nation. His steadiness, industry and sobriety are political virtues which make for the stability and permanence of our government.

in the bull pen for purposes of the warm up, a sort of guarded old backstop who takes what the pitchers have to throw and then sends them into the real ball game. Too many punches have hit Maloney on the countenance and, for his own good, not enough of them have bounced.

Anyhow, that's the way the Schmelling crowd sees him and I trust they are making no mistake. To err is human and so is a punch on the nose. If Schmelling's happened to be the nose in question, the punch that hit it would cost him $200,000 in the June heavyweight finals and his chance at the million-dollar title, so he will do well to have a care. This Maloney has had his moments, as mentioned. It must be admitted, however, that these are most infrequent compared to the 10 moments he usually has—one for each beat of the referee's count.

ROBERT LEES EDGE JACKSON

Bob Shea Pulls Real Stalling Stunt To Hold Lead of 31-30.

With Bob Shea leading the team in last minute stalling, the Columbus Robert Lee Haberdasher pro cagers defeated Jackson, Mich., Sunday at the K. of C. gym, Columbus, by a score of 31-30.

The game was sensational in every sense of the word and although the Robert Lee cagers held an edge of five points with only a few minutes to play, the Jackson team came within one point of tying the count. Then Shea came into his own. He would dribble half way to the Jackson defense then would retrace his steps, taking plenty of time.

Shea and Mike O'Neil each with eight points, led the Haberdasher scoring.

SHRINERS TO HAVE BIG FORMAL BALL

Many From Here Expected To Attend Meeting In Columbus Friday.

Clark Hunsicker, who is the head of the local Shrine club, makes the following announcement which will be of high interest to local Shriners and their wives:

Shriners and their ladies from this vicinity, which is in the jurisdiction of Aladdin Temple in Columbus, will attend the big formal ball which Aladdin will hold at Masonic Temple, in Columbus, Friday evening, Jan. 31, according to reports received by John J. Baird, Aladdin's newly-elected Potentate.

The intention is to make this junction the chief social event of the Shrine of the year, the most brilliant in the history of Ohio's capital city. The Shriners and their guests will be received by Potentate Baird and Mrs. Baird, assisted by past potentates, members of the official divan and their ladies.

The banquet held in connection with this affair, will be served soon after 10 p. m.

Blames Durant for Crash

PICKAWAY HAS 34 ACCIDENTS

Month of December Sees Good Percentage In Industrial Fatalities.

While the 99 fatal accidents in Ohio industries in December was an increase of eight over the preceding month, non-fatal claims were reduced almost 2,000, which reduced the proportionate time loss increase for the month, the days lost being 872,011, or only 10,000 more than in the preceding month.

Pickaway-co. had 34 accidents, of which one was fatal, none caused permanent disability, eight caused over seven days lost time, five, seven days or less and 20 no loss of time. In November, this county had 28 accidents with a time loss of 744 days.

The Division of Safety and Hygiene of the Industrial Commission has announced that a 25 per cent reduction in accidents in 1930 will be the goal of safety effort in the current year. Superintendent Thos. P. Kearns of the Division is optimistic over the prospects for accident prevention this year and predicated his belief in the success of industrial safety on the interest and enthusiasm shown in the recent All-Ohio Safety Congress, which was attended by almost 2,000 representatives of Ohio industries. He also cites the community interest aroused by many safety campaigns now in progress throughout the state as probable aids to more carefulness in industrial work.

The electric railway industry last year "earned the largest net revenue in its history and carried 16,000,000 passengers." The statistician doesn't say how many of them stood up.

OHIO CHAMBER COMMERCE TO STUDY BUS SITUATION

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 27.—The fact that death has claimed 20 persons in motor bus accidents and at least ten have been seriously injured during the last 20 days in Ohio, is a matter which will be given attention by the Board of Directors of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, when they meet in Columbus, on Wednesday, Jan. 29. Undoubtedly some recommendation will come from the board to make such accidents much less likely to occur and to throw more adequate safeguards around operation of busses.

A fact finding study has been given this matter by the Research Department of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce. As a result a tabulation has been compiled and correlated giving a nation-wide picture of efforts in various states to minimize accidents in motor traffic. This study has been conducted in an effort not only to discover the reasons for accidents, but to find remedies which have been applied to minimize the casualties. Out of this study have come several interesting facts.

It is interesting to know that deaths caused by all motor accidents in Ohio are not in excess of the number of fatalities recorded in a number of other states per motor population. However, it is also found that other states have very materially reduced the motor casualties by enactment and enforcement of remedial measures.

FACTS DEVELOP

Another fact which is developed is that states which have reduced the death rate from operation of motor vehicles have drivers' license laws upon their statute books, which also provide for adequate means of enforcement.

A third development is that within a comparatively short time after drivers' license laws are put into effect motor casualties show a decrease of approximately 20 per cent.

The Ohio Chamber of Commerce has already endorsed a driver's license law if and when supported by proper examination and when provision is made for some agency which will make possible proper enforcement, such, for instance, as the establishment of a system of state rural police. In the judgement of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce the need for adoption of remedial measures has long been evident, but the bus crash near Eaton, Ohio, Jan. 2, when two persons were killed and 11 injured, and the school bus crash at Berea last Wednesday, simply jar the public conscience into a realization that action must be taken to safeguard the school children and the public generally from such disasters.

AIR MAIL FOR ALL
The air mail transport, while growing rapidly, is still limited in scope. Postmaster-general Brown wants Congress to authorize a big extension of the service. He would permit the carrying of mail bags on passenger planes as well as on regular mail planes, and thus extend the service to every part of the country.

It is estimated that by this policy the air mail routes, which now cover about 14,000 miles, would immediately jump to 40,000 miles. "This looks like a sound policy, benefitting not only the mail service, but the aviation industry and business in general. With more air carriers, the air mail could be better routed and delivered quicker. There should be a big growth in volume, swelling postal receipts to meet the cost before long, and in quickening of the business pulse."

HELP FOR POETS
The Chicago Foundation of Literature is going to develop American fiction, drama and poetry—especially poetry—or bust a suspender. It has real money to use in "aiding, fostering, promoting, developing and encouraging meritorious work by American writers." And it proposes to spend $25,000 a year on poetry prizes. This ought to boom the paper, fountain pen and typewriter industries; if nothing more. You can buy a lot of poetry for $25,000. In fact, as every newspaper and magazine, you can buy a lot of poetry for nothing. There are even poets willing to pay for getting their poems printed.

With such inducements offered, quantity production of verse is assured. Some poetical genius starving in a garret—or living in a garage, which is more in the modern manner—may be encouraged. Now Keates and Chattertons and Verlaines and Heines and Poes may be discovered, but newspaper folk just naturally grow cynical about such matters. Some editors are mean enough to maintain that poetry should be discouraged, and it would be better to pay young poets to refrain from writing. There is something to be said for this attitude, too, on the old theory that genius will break through and make good in spite of obstacles.

GOLD BRICKS, ET AL
People still fall for ancient rackets that have been exposed so many times that it would seem no one could be caught by them again. The other day in New York a man with the very respectable nest egg of $15,000 thought he had a chance to make a lot of money. He was approached by three strangers who told him they had a wonderful invention. It was a machine that manufactured money. After a demonstration in which the thing appeared to work, the victim parted with $15,000 and took the machine home. He turned the handle over and over, but no money came out. Police have caught one of the men who tricked him, and perhaps some of his $15,000 may be restored to him. If so, let's plain lucky.

Innovations
It were good, therefore, that men in their innovations would follow the example of time itself, which indeed innovates greatly, but quietly by degrees scarce to be perceived.—Francis Bacon (1561-1626). "Of Innovation."

Feet of Clay
We consecrate a great deal of nonsense, because it was allowed by great men. There is none without his foible.—Emerson.

"STORM-TOSSED"

BY HELEN SCHERMERHORN YOUNG

CHAPTER XXX.
WEDNESDAY . . . waiting! Waiting all day for Dick to telephone. She could not call him up—something held her back. No word that evening. She refrained from mentioning his name again. Finally she asked: "When is Dick leaving?" "Tomorrow on the Century." Tried to get him for dinner to-night again, but he was busy. Thursday. . . feeling sick and miserable! The telephone rang all morning. Each time the bell gave the first tinkle, Enid took the receiver off the hook and waited breathlessly to hear Dick's deep "Hello!" Why hadn't he called? There was Anna telling her lunch was ready. Several times the telephone rang during lunch. Once Ned was on the wire just to see how she was. The Century left at two-forty. Two o'clock now. Two-thirty. "Oh, Dick. Why don't you call?" Two-thirty-five. Only five more minutes. He'd have to take that train and he had left for it, because she had called up the hotel in desperation and been told by the head porter that Mr. Grant was on his way to the Grand Central. Yes, Mr. Grant had checked out—was leaving on the Century. The first tinkle of the bell. "Enid. I've been trying to get you." "Yes, Dick." "I couldn't come to see you, Enid." "I'll be thinking of you, Enid, and waiting to hear from you. I'll be thinking of you." She glanced at the clock. "Dick," she held her lips close to the telephone and covered her mouth and the mouthpiece with her hand. She glanced at the door. "Dick," she whispered, "I haven't told Ned anything—because—Dick, I'm going to have a baby. . . It's our baby, Dick." "Enid!" How much can be expressed in one word! All the love and pride and fear and guilt and glory which Dick felt in his soul were in that word. A clicking sound and then, "What number please? No, I cannot trace the number." One minute before train-time. Two-forty. The Century was pulling out, carrying Enid's heart with it. Yes, she would write to Ned about the baby's coming after he was gone. That was it. And she had told Dick the reason she was putting it off. She couldn't spend Ned's money to live on now—she couldn't do it—and for the expenses of having the baby—that she simply could not and would not do. Oh, Dick—did you were only here! Then she happened to hear some one say that money could be borrowed in advance from the bank where an estate was left as a trust fund. That was now Mummy had left her money—a trust fund for Ned and herself—but they said it would take a year to settle it.

Bad Habits—and Nerves!

Dr. Copeland's Health Topic Today

Drawing Pictures While 'Phoning, Cracking Joints, Tapping the Feet and Biting the Finger Nails, Are Nervous Habits, Says Authority.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IT IS WELL to form good habits. To acquire bad ones, hard to get rid of, is most undesirable. Most of us have a lot of miserable habits. We admit the truth in our modest moments.

Nervous people give expression to their feelings in a number of ways. For instance, a man may tap on the floor with his foot. He keeps pattering away, hour after hour.

Your next neighbor may pound on the table with his fist to give emphasis to his thought. Another crosses one leg over the other and swings his foot up and down, keeping time with invisible music.

Perhaps you have the habit of making marvelous geometric figures as you telephone. You may make pictures on a pad as the President does. As you talk business over the telephone you may gesticulate with one arm.

Sometimes we are driven nearly distracted by somebody who clicks his tongue, or cracks his joints, or keeps doing some other foolish thing. Everyone has some bad habit of this sort.

Among such wrong performance is the biting of the nails. It is one of the things that no one should do. It is a nervous habit. Girls have this habit more than boys.

Not only is this habit offensive in taste, but it is a violation of the rules of hygiene. The fingers should never be put to the mouth except after they have been made absolutely clean by thorough washing.

Germs of disease and dirt are carried to the mouth in biting the nails. Goodness knows enough of these miserable germs get into the system anyway. Fortunately, the body is capable of taking care of most bacteria and germs, but if we can make sure of keeping them out we should do so.

Think of the people who wet their fingers to turn a page, and to count filthy money! The hands cannot possibly stay clean all the while. You should not place these soiled finger tips to your lips.

Break this habit if you have it. Teach every child to shun the bad practice of biting the nails. The finer nails, as well as the nails of the toes, should be given attention. You are judged a great deal by the appearance you make. Well cared for finger nails, good habits of all kinds, all tell the tale of cleanliness and good health. They help your social standing.

You cannot quickly overcome nervous practices of long standing, but watch yourself and see what bad habits you can eliminate. To do so will make you more efficient give you sounder physique and improve your well-being generally.

Letters To Editor

Editor's Note

The Herald welcomes "Letters to the Editor" from its readers, but—all letters sent in must be signed by the author, to be recognized, and the Herald reserves the right to publish only those that they think will be of interest to the subscribers.

If the author does not desire his name to be used, with the letter when published, initials will be used upon request.

Editor, Circleville Herald, Circleville, Ohio.
My Dear Sir:

I have just read your editorial in Thursday evening's paper. It rings true and is the finest thing I have seen in the paper since the consolidation.

You describe conditions known, substantially, by every thoughtful and observing citizen of our little city.

We would be better off so far as relieving the taxpayers is concerned, if every county and municipal law-enforcement official would resign. Conditions would be little worse, if any and we would be saving the salaries paid out.

A community newspaper is in duty bound to give the people the news, and to say that community officials refuse to enforce the laws, is a most important and essential kind of news.

I congratulate you upon the stand the paper has taken and hasten to assure you that the great body of our law-abiding citizens will rally to your support in your effort to compel decency and respect for law.

Theatres

AT CLIFTONA

An actor with wide stage experience as well as screen experience was the requirement for every important role in "Condemned!" the new Ronald Colman starring picture which is at the Cliftona Theatre on Monday, and Tuesday, under the auspices of Samuel Goldwyn. The close connection between Broadway and Hollywood nowadays was never better emphasized than in this film of life in the prison colonies of Devil's Island, the notorious French penal settlement off the coast of South America.

American audiences know Ronald Colman, star of the picture, as a movie figure altogether, remembering such popular successes as "The Dark Angel," "Beau Geste," "The Magic Flame" and "Bulldog Drummond." But at home in England, before and after his service in the World War, Mr. Colman was one of the better known leading men on the English stage, having acted in that capacity for such noted British actresses as Gladys Cooper. He even tried his hand on the New York stage before Henry King gave him his first American picture role as leading man for Lillian Gish in "The White Sister."

Even before "The Trial of Mary Dugan," Ann Pennington's blonde beauty was well known on Broadway, the same beauty which now makes her such an appealing heroine in "Condemned!" She worked with the famous Provincetown Players of New York in the days when Eugene O'Neill was their chief ornament, and has made great successes in such plays as "Tarnish," "Stolen Fruit" and "The Woman disputed." "The Trial of Mary Dugan" two years ago made her internationally famous.

Louis Wolheim is another stage veteran who achieved even greater fame in pictures.

AT THE GRAND

"Thru Different Eyes" is the title of the picture appearing at the Grand Theatre Monday in which Mary Duncan, Warner Baxter and Edmund Lowe star. The story is a gripping drama with the "Eternal Triangle" playing a big part.

Universal Talking News is also scheduled.

EDDIE POWELL

On Friday, Jan. 31, at the Grand Theatre, Eddie Powell will usher in nearly all of the bright spots of his 1930 Dance Revue, which is an annual event for Columbus about the middle of May.

This year, most of the show has been completed early, and Mr. Powell is arranging several bookings in nearby cities, for the purpose of keeping the performers in prime condition, and those who are unable to attend the performance in Columbus, may have the opportunity of seeing it right at home.

All seats are to be reserved.

"Warp" and "Woof"

AIR MAIL FOR ALL

The air mail transport, while growing rapidly, is still limited in scope. Postmaster-general Brown wants Congress to authorize a big extension of the service. He would permit the carrying of mail bags on passenger planes as well as on regular mail planes, and thus extend the service to every part of the country.

It is estimated that by this policy the air mail routes, which now cover about 14,000 miles, would immediately jump to 40,000 miles.

This looks like a sound policy, benefitting not only the mail service, but the aviation industry and business in general. With more air carriers, the air mail could be better routed and delivered quicker.

There should be a big growth in volume, swelling postal receipts to meet the cost before long, and in quickening of the business pulse.

HELP FOR POETS

The Chicago Foundation of Literature is going to develop American fiction, drama and poetry—especially poetry—or bust a suspender. It has real money to use in "aiding, fostering, promoting, developing and encouraging meritorious work by American writers." And it proposes to spend $25,000 a year on poetry prizes.

This ought to boom the paper, fountain pen and typewriter industries, if nothing more. You can buy a lot of poetry for $25,000. In fact, as every newspaper and magazine, you can buy a lot of poetry for nothing. There are even poets willing to pay for getting their poems printed.

With such inducements offered, quantity production of verse is assured. Some poetical genius starving in a garret—or living in a garage, which is more in the modern manner—may be encouraged. Now Keatses and Chattertons and Verlaines and Heines and Poes may be discovered, but newspaper folk just naturally grow cynical about such matters. Some editors are mean enough to maintain that poetry should be discouraged, and it would be better to pay young poets to refrain from writing.

There is something to be said for this attitude, too, on the old theory that genius will break through and make good in spite of obstacles.

GOLD BRICKS, ET AL
People still fall for ancient rackets that have been exposed so many times that it would seem no one could be caught by them again.

The other day in New York a man with the very respectable nest egg of $15,000 thought he had a chance to make a lot of money. He was approached by three strangers who told him they had a wonderful invention. It was a machine that manufactured money. After a demonstration in which the thing appeared to work, the victim parted with $15,000 and took the machine home. He turned the handle over and over, but no money came out. Police have caught one of the men who tricked him, and perhaps some of his $15,000 may be restored to him. If so, he's plain lucky.

Ignorance and cupidity are a costly combination in a man's character.

"STORM-TOSSED"

CHAPTER XXX.
WEDNESDAY . . . waiting! Waiting all day for Dick to telephone. She could not call him up—something held her back. No word that evening. She refrained from mentioning his name again. Finally she asked: "When is Dick leaving?" "Tomorrow on the Century. Tried to get him for dinner to-night again, but he was busy." Thursday . . . feeling sick and miserable! The telephone rang all morning. Each time the bell gave the first tinkle, Enid took the receiver off the hook and waited breathlessly to hear Dick's deep "Hello!"

Why hadn't he called? There was Anna telling her lunch was ready. Several times the telephone rang during lunch. Once Ned was on the wire just to see how she was.

The Century left at two-forty. Two o'clock now. Two-thirty. "Oh, Dick. Why don't you call?" Two-thirty-five. Only five more minutes. He'd have to take that train and he had left for it, because she had called up the hotel in desperation and been told by the head porter that Mr. Grant was on his way to the Grand Central. Yes, Mr. Grant had checked out—was leaving on the Century. The first tinkle of the bell.

"Enid. I've been trying to get you." "Yes, Dick." "I couldn't come to see you, Enid." "I understand, Dick." "I'll be thinking of you, Enid, and waiting to hear from you. I'll be thinking . . ."

She glanced at the clock. "Dick!" she held her lips close to the telephone and covered her mouth and the mouthpiece with her hand. She glanced at the door. "Dick," she whispered, "I haven't told Ned anything—because—Dick, I'm going to have a baby . . . It's our baby, Dick." "Enid!"

How much can be expressed in one word! All the love and pride and fear and guilt and glory which Dick felt in his soul were in that word.

A clicking sound and then, "What number please?" No. I cannot trace the number. . . . One minute before train-time. Two-forty. The Century was pulling out, carrying Enid's heart with it.

Yes, she would write to Ned about the baby's coming after he was gone. That was it. And she had told Dick the reason she was putting it off.

She couldn't spend Ned's money to live on now—she couldn't do it—and for the expenses of having the baby—that she simply could not and would not do. Oh, Dick—if you were only here!

Borrow—make a loan. To whom would she go to see about this? She couldn't ask Ned about it. She couldn't write to Dave. What would she do?

Ned would leave her money deposited in the bank. She wouldn't touch a cent of it, no not one cent. It would be awkward to go to the bank, but everything was to be awkward and complicated. She would go right away to Mr. White, Mummy's lawyer. Do lawyers ask questions? Would he want to know why? She could say it was for a friend—another lie. How distasteful to her they were—lies, deceptions. She had never known anything about even an evasion of the truth. She was not bred in that way.

"Why certainly, Mrs. Grier," Mr. White said when she tremblingly asked him. "That is very common. It may take several weeks, but I can arrange that for you without any difficulty with the trust company. I'll advise you when it has gone through."

Ned might see the letter—and it would not be natural for her not to have mentioned it. She thought quickly.

"May I call you up and inquire, Mr. White? I would prefer to come down and get it from you direct. If you will ask the bank to send it to you instead of me I shall be grateful."

Mr. White rubbed his chin as she went out of the office. "Strange lot the new generation. Suppose young Grier is close with her. She might be in debt. They play bridge for high stakes these days."

The weeks which preceded Ned's departure were a terrific strain on Enid. He was so kind and thoughtful in every arrangement for her comfort during his absence and so gentle and affectionate. The night before he left was one of torture. How could she have done this great injustice to the man who loved her so truly and unselfishly?

She couldn't keep this thing a secret much longer now. As soon as she had written the letter to tell Ned it would be all right, but she didn't want to talk about it at home—not until Ned was on the ship way out there on the Pacific, because if she told it before to her friends some one might mention it to him. And there was her mother-in-law, Mrs. Grier. She would be wild with joy. And what a blow to Mother Grier the divorce would be!

Oh, how much sorrow that one night out there at Serana was causing! She'd close the apartment for good, say she was going to Atlantic City for a few days and go west from there. That would save a lot of explaining. When she took the train for the West she would cut loose from everything—because she would write that letter. Then she and Dick would live in the West. She would never come home again!

Yes—she was going out to spend Christmas with her brother and Pauline.

She was packing; Anna was helping her. How she hated to leave Anna! She might never see her again. For the present she would keep Anna on full salary. To part suddenly with Anna, who had lived with her since she first started housekeeping, would be too awful. She couldn't do it now.

That night in Atlantic City Enid slept like a woman drugged. The dull roar of the ocean soothed her, and she felt the relief of a first step taken on a difficult and hard journey—at least she was in action now and felt a certain release from surroundings and friends which brought her trying situation to her mind continually.

It was good to sit comfortably wrapped up in heavy rugs in a rolling-chair and move slowly along the boardwalk. Several times she saw friends from New York whom she knew, but she pulled her hat down and her collar up. She didn't want to talk to them. They would think it strange that she was in Atlantic City by herself.

The day she went back to New York and crossed from the Pennsylvania Station to the Grand Central she felt like a fugitive. How strange! There she was in the New York that she loved as only a born New Yorker loves the city—and she was running away from it. But there was nothing for her in her home—it was her home no longer and Mummy—oh—

Dick! She wanted to get out into his country. That was where she belonged now. The mountains would help her to think more clearly, and she would be with David and Pauline. She had written them that she would come direct to the ranch by train and would telegraph them just as soon as she arrived in San Francisco.

Chicago. She lunched and then went to her room and prepared to rest until dinner. Her train for the West left about eight.

She took off her dress and, as she stood in front of the mirror, brushing back her sleek hair, she suddenly felt a gentle flutter under her heart—like that of a feathered bird. Her baby! Tears came to her eyes, and she knelt by the bed and thanked God for the little life which had just made itself known to her and begged Him to watch over her. "Dear God—forgive me. I loved him so."

Then she wrote a letter to Ned, very short and sweet, telling him that she was going to have a baby; that she had known it for some time, but didn't want to worry him by speaking of it as he had to make the trip; that she'd be all right with Pauline and Dave; and ending with "Take care of yourself; don't worry about me!"

The little life which she had felt had given her strength and direction to write that letter. A Now Enid was proud—and not lonely. She held her head very erectly as she sat at dinner that night, and a sweet expression of dignity and tenderness was in her eyes which had never been there before. She did not bend her shoulders forward now.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IT IS WELL to form good habits. To acquire bad ones, hard to get rid of, is most undesirable. Most of us have a lot of miserable habits. We admit the truth in our modest moments.

Nervous people give expression to their feelings in a number of ways. For instance, a man may tap on the floor with his foot. He keeps pattering away, hour after hour.

Your next neighbor may pound on the table with his fist to give emphasis to his thought. Another crosses one leg over the other and swings his foot up and down, keeping time with invisible music.

Perhaps you have the habit of making marvelous geometric figures as you telephone. You may make pictures on a pad as the President does. As you talk business over the telephone you may gesticulate with one arm.

Sometimes we are driven nearly distracted by somebody who clicks his tongue, or cracks his joints, or keeps doing some other foolish thing. Everyone has some bad habit of this sort.

Among such wrong performance is the biting of the nails. It is one of the things that no one should do. It is a nervous habit.

Not only is this habit offensive in taste, but it is a violation of the rules of hygiene. The fingers should never be put to the mouth except after they have been washed absolutely clean by thorough washing.

Germs of disease and dirt are carried to the mouth in biting the nails. Goodness knows enough of these miserable germs get into the system anyway. Fortunately, the body is capable of taking care of most bacteria and germs, but if we can make sure of keeping them out we should do so.

Think of the people who wet their fingers to turn a page, and to count filthy money! The hands cannot possibly stay clean all the while. You should not place these soiled finger tips to your lips.

Break this habit if you have it. Teach every child to shun the bad practice of biting the nails. The finger nails, as well as the nails of the toes, should be given attention. You are judged a great deal by the appearance you make. Well cared for finger nails, good habits of all kinds, all tell the tale of cleanliness and good health. They help your social standing.

You cannot quickly overcome nervous practices of long standing, but watch yourself and see what bad habits you can eliminate. To do so will make you more efficient, give you sounder physique and improve your well-being generally.

I had smothering attacks and dizzy spells. I was in a terrible condition when I started taking Konjola. But just three bottles of this remarkable medicine made a new person of me. I eat, sleep and feel like I did three years ago, and never shall I cease to praise Konjola, the medicine that made this new and glorious health possible."

James Trone Weds Eleanor Ellison Saturday Evening

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Trone of E. Franklin-st. have returned from Portsmouth where they attended the wedding of Mr. Trone's son, James to Miss Eleanor Ellison, which took place Saturday night.

With myriads of glowing tapers in branched candelabra and softened lights throughout the spacious rooms, the marriage of Miss Ellison, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. N. Ellison and Mr. James Trone was solemnized in the handsome new home of Dr. and Mrs. Ellison on Mt. Tabor, Portsmouth, Saturday evening at half past eight o'clock. Rev. Harold Hohly, rector of All Saints church, officiated at the ceremony.

The entire lower floor was a flower garden and the mantel in the living room where the ceremony was said, was banked with Southern smilax, feathery ferns, roses, lilies, snapdragons and chrysanthemums and on either side were stately palms, ferns and candelabra, forming an improvised altar. The stairway and pathway to the altar, were carpeted with white.

A trio played a program of Miss Ellison's favorite musical numbers, "Liebestraum" by Liszt, "The Old Refrain" by Kreisler, "Serenade" by Toselli and "Songs My Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak.

The bridal procession wended its way down the stairway, with Lohengrin's wedding march played as a processional by the trio. First in line, was Miss Edna Hauck, in egg shell chiffon, with slippers of blue and blue feather fan. The attendants gowns were all of the same material and were fashioned in the new silhouette with trains. Mrs. James D. Williams came next and her slippers and fan were rose, while Mrs. James Breece, who followed, wore slippers of green and carried a green feather fan. Miss Ellis entered with her father and was joined in the living room by Mr. Trone, his best man, Mr. James Breece and Rev. Harold Hohly, who entered through the west door of the living room. The bride made a charming picture in a gown of ivory satin ingeniously modeled on princess lines, with long sleeves, long line effect, with train. The veil, which fell in soft folds beyond the train of the gown, was of real lace and was caught with orange blossoms. Her flowers were calla lilies, in an arm bouquet tied with white lace and she carried a white leather prayer book, with white satin streamers extending from it. When the bride party formed at the altar, the prayer book was handed to Rev. Hohly, for the service.

During the ceremony Mrs. Knost at the piano and Mrs. Schnabl, violin, played softly, "The Swan," by Saint Saens.

The ceremony was witnessed by friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom and after the ceremony congratulations were received by Mr. and Mrs. Trone and a reception was held. A lovely ice course in shades of yellow and light pink was served and the dining table and buffet were elaborately decorated in yellow, white and light pink. A beautiful wedding cake and a long center piece of roses, chrysanthemums and Southern smilax, made the table appointments unusually attractive.

Mr. and Mrs. Trone are prominent socially in Portsmouth and have many warm friends. Mrs. Trone is a graduate of Highland Hall, Hollidaysburg, Pa., and also of La Salle Seminary, Boston, Mass. Mr. Trone, who holds a splendid position with the Breece Manufacturing Company, is a graduate of Portsmouth high school and of Ohio University, at Athens. He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

As a traveling costume, the bride wore a coat of brown, with hat and corresponding accessories. Following a wedding trip, they will make their home with the bride's parents.

Bringing Electricity to Holy Land

WHILE JORDAN RIVER rolls on, it will be bringing power, light and prosperity to the people of Palestine. After many years of planning, the ambitious project of the Russian engineer, Rutenberg is at last to become reality, and the Holy Land will be the scene of one of the largest electrical enterprises in Europe.

Since the Palestine mandate became effective the Holy Land has seen steady influx of population. And modern methods in working and living are fast superseding primitive conditions in even the smallest settlement. And so the hum of the dynamo is to sound its note of progress, and Jerusalem is to bask in the glow of the arc lamp.

The turbulent waters of the Jordan, which at some points falls 100 feet, are to be utilized, and in addition to the harnessing of this power, 25 foot dams are to be erected in this river and the Jer-muk River just above the confluence of the two streams. A lake 50 feet wide and 6 miles long is to be built in order to hold the water necessary to generate the power. After three giant turbines have done their work, the water will be turned back to the rivers. It is estimated that there will be an excess current of 6,300 volts, and this power will be transformed to high tension and be then conveyed to the principal transformer station. From this point, the power will be conveyed to Haifa and the settlement of Tel-Aviv, the all-Jewish city.

It is expected that the Rutenberg project will bring much prosperity to Jerusalem and plans are being made for factories and plants on an ambitious scale all calculated to bring the Holy Land in line with progress and modern achievement. Work is being rushed and it is hoped to complete the various units by the Spring.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 27.—Planes and dog sleds carried on their search today along the barren Siberian coastline for the bodies of Lieut. Carl Ben Eielson, noted Arctic flier, and Earl Borden, his mechanic.

Their wrecked cabin plane, found ten miles inland from the Siberian coast, is all that searchers have been able to find which might indicate the fate of the two men.

Buried beneath drifts of snow, the torn fuselage and wings bore mute evidence of a terrific crash which tore the plane's power plant from its fastenings and hurled it yards away. Workers were to dig away the snow that surrounds the plane in their search for further trace of the men.

CABIN NOT DAMAGED
Although the engine was dislodged, one wing was crushed and the tail torn off, the cabin was not damaged. Inside, however, pilots Joe Crosson and Harold Gillam, who made the discovery, found their thirty days' food supply untouched.

A careful search of the plane itself and the drifts of snow that all but buried it revealed no trace

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

James Trone Weds Eleanor Ellison Saturday Evening

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Trone of E. Franklin-st have returned from Portsmouth where they attended the wedding of Mr. Trone's son, James to Miss Eleanor Ellison, which took place Saturday night.

With myriads of glowing tapers in branched candelabra and softened lights throughout the spacious rooms, the marriage of Miss Ellison, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. N. Ellison and Mr. James Trone was solemnized in the handsome new home of Dr. and Mrs. Ellison on Mt. Tabor, Portsmouth, Saturday evening at half after eight o'clock. Rev. Harold Hohly, rector of All Saints church, officiated at the ceremony.

The entire lower floor was a flower garden and the mantel in the living room where the ceremony was said, was banked with Southern smilax, feathery ferns, roses, lilies, snapdragons and chrysanthemums and on either side were stately palms, ferns and candelabra, forming an improvised altar. The stairway and pathway to the altar, were carpeted with white.

A trio played a program of Miss Ellison's favorite musical numbers, "Liebestraum" by Liszt, "The Old Refrain" by Kreisler, "Serenade" by Toselli and "Songs My Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak.

The bridal procession wended its way down the stairway, with Lo-hengrin's wedding march played as a processional by the trio. First in line, was Miss Edna Hauk, in egg shell chiffon, with slippers of blue and blue feather fan. The attendants gowns were all of the same material and were fashioned in the new silhouette with trains. Mrs. James D. Williams came next and her slippers and fan were rose, while Mrs. James Breece, who followed, wore slippers of green and carried a green feather fan. Miss Ellis entered with her father and was joined in the living room by Mr. Trone, his best man, Mr. James Breece and Rev. Harold Hohly, who entered through the west door of the living room. The bride made a charming picture in a gown of ivory satin ingeniously modeled on princess lines, with long sleeves, long line effect, with train. The veil, which fell in soft folds beyond the train of the gown, was of real lace and was caught with orange blossoms. Her flowers were calla lilies, in an arm bouquet tied with white lace and she carried a white leather prayer book, with white satin streamers extending from it. When the bride party formed at the altar, the prayer book was handed to Rev. Hohly, for the service.

During the ceremony Mrs. Knost at the piano and Mrs. Schnabl, violin, played softly, "The Swan," by Saint Saens.

The ceremony was witnessed by friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom and after the ceremony congratulations were received by Mr. and Mrs. Trone and a reception was held. A lovely ice course in shades of yellow and light pink was served and the dining table and buffet were elaborately decorated in yellow, white and light pink. A beautiful wedding cake and a long center piece of roses, chrysanthemums and Southern smilax, made the table appointments unusually attractive.

Mr. and Mrs. Trone are prominent socially in Portsmouth and have many warm friends. Mrs. Trone is a graduate of Highland Hall, Hollidaysburg, Pa., and also of La Salle Seminary, Boston, Mass. Mr. Trone, who holds a splendid position with the Breece Manufacturing Company, is a graduate of Portsmouth high school and of Ohio University, in Athens. He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.
